"... to embroider the culture of America with the beauty of Buddhism" was the goal expressed Sunday when the beautiful new Korean Buddhist Temple Sambosa (Three Treasures) was dedicated in Carmel Valley. This golden

Buddha was one of three figures of the gentle philosopher on the altar, which was banked with fruit and flowers for the opening ceremony. For more on this unique union of East and West, see pictures on page 6. Photo by George T.C. Smith

Branson's statement on Odello rezoning vote

The following statement was made by Supervisor Willard Branson prior to his motion on Jan. 23 to accept the environmental impact report prepared on the Odello development. He has asked that these remarks be printed in full to explain his vote and his subsequent motion to approve the Carmel Lagoon Reserve Redevelopment Project, to permit construction of a 300-unit hotel and 298 condominiums on the eastern side of the Odello ranch in exchange for no development on the western 155 acres.

By WILLARD BRANSON

On October 6 of 1971 before this board I made the statement that there are "serious environmental considerations yet to be answered or resolved before a blade touches the ground." Such considerations have been compounded in the "Environmental Impact Report" and of course we find different views of this report, which is only natural.

This matter has had scores of meetings of one kind or another for the past two years—many of which I attended. The OLAF effort which has been so commendable along with the offer from the City of Carmel and others has paved the way to make it possible for us to enter into a compromise which will find the western portion of this land as open space—actual open space—not a dream. Many of our citizens have taken a part in these meetings and given most unselfishly of their time. It appears that all known formulae and options have been sought out.

Today after hearing submitted testimony, both oral and written—it is time for this board to squarely face the issue concerning not only the "Carmel Lagoon Reserve Redevelopment Project" but the zoning as well.

This plan is one which appears to best do justice to the land, and certainly a most highly refined one when we consider that the original treatment of the 292 acres as zoned would have made it possible to cover both the west and east with an everlasting monument of roof tops to be seen from most vantage points—Carmel Point, Rancho Rio Vista, Hatton Fields and others. In my studied opinion we have reached that point where we can not deny the owners of the land—even though most—if not all of us would prefer it to remain as it is.

It is my prayer that the possible effects of Proposition 20 and the Area Plan—after it has all of the wrinkles and there are more than a few—ironed out, will bring a well-documented concert where we can see what to reasonably expect in matters of this kind. Then we can build our fence on the Monterey Peninsula and we can all call it a "fence of trust."

I have been receiving many inquiries about a replacement for Charles Kramer, who resigned from the Monterey County Planning Commission last week because of the time consumed by his new role as chairman of the Regional Coastal Commission.

We have several prospective persons in mind for the appointment to the planning commission, none of which I feel I can name at this time, for one reason or another.

It is difficult to find a person who has both the time and the interest of our community and who can find the rationale which is required to reach objective decisions on this important commission.

Our problem is to find a person who is not connected with:

1. Land Development
2. Oil Companies
3. Real Estate
4. An Attorney
5. Large Land Owner
6. Groups with Special Vested Interests
7. Building Trades
8. Tourist Industry

to name a few.

I can only say that we will appoint a woman, or man, whom I feel best qualified to serve the interests of the environment, the community and the people.

THE TOWN CRIER

The State of California Office of Emergency Services has announced that a brochure entitled "Your Community Emergency Plan" is being mailed to all Monterey County households in February. The plan contains instructions to help residents plan for emergencies. It was prepared by the California Office of Emergency Services in cooperation with local governments.

Included in the plan are suggestions regarding what citizens should do in the event of natural disasters such as floods and earthquakes. Also included is information about what to do and where to go in the event of nuclear attack.

The state advises that residents should read their plan carefully and save it for future reference.

Mrs. Daniel McDonald of Fairway Place will head the 1973 Heart Fund campaign in Carmel Valley. The announcement was made by Mrs. Alan Pattee, Monterey County Chairman for the drive. The campaign will be conducted here and throughout the nation during February, declared American Heart Month by an Act of Congress.

Mrs. McDonald cited the urgent need in the forthcoming campaign. "More than 675,000 Americans will die this year of heart attack, the number one killer in the nation," she said. "The drive will seek to raise funds to reduce death and disability from heart attack and other heart and blood vessel diseases."

Heart programs in the tri-county area are administered by the Central Mission Trails Heart Association, 541-A South Main Street, Salinas.

Briefs from Carmel Valley Manor

By EDNA KASCH

Last Saturday evening the meeting house at Carmel Valley Manor was filled with residents of the Manor and their guests to hear Roberta Price, pianist, of Whittier, Calif.

The program began with the all too seldom played Beethoven Variations in F. Major, followed by the beautiful Schubert Sonata, Op. 143, A Minor. It was a pleasure to hear them interpreted so sensitively. She then played the beautiful Waldesrauschen by Liszt, followed by an exceptionally interesting Chopin group, ending with the tremendous F Minor, Op. 52 Ballade, each with the purest of tone and the vigor of an accomplished artist.

Roberta Price was born in Chefoo, China, of missionary parents, receiving her early education in British and American Missionary schools. She came to the United States to live at the age of 17, enrolling in the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, where she became a student of Maud Okkelberg, now a resident of Carmel Valley Manor.

After receiving her bachelor and master's degrees in piano, Mrs. Price taught at Mary Bardin-Baylor College in Belton, Tex., and Muskingum College in New Concord, Ohio.

She now resides in Whittier with her family, where she has continued study with Rosina Lhevinne, Lee Pattison, and Lillian Steuber and remains active as a performer and teacher.

THE ORGANIC GARDENER

... in Carmel Valley

By LEE HALL

COMMERCIAL ORGANIC FOOD

The New York Times recently had an article about big firms' new interest in "Health" foods. Sale of Health foods went from $100 million in 1970 to between 3 and $400 million in 1971. Big firms were not interested before because top level managers thought that the interest in health and organic foods was just a passing fad. Now it appears that young people are convinced that good food is important and they are the wage earners of tomorrow. Interest in good food waxes and wanes, but each time it waxes more than it wanes. Some of the foods that started out as a specialty health food have made it to the supermarket shelves, including V-8 juice and poly unsaturated oils. These two, of course, were not claimed to be organically grown, but were claimed to be healthful.

Wall Street is beginning to take notice because it is convinced that the younger generation is ecology minded and is not afraid to change eating habits. Among publicly owned companies that are getting into health foods specialty stores (not necessarily organically grown) are Pet, Inc., Sears, Purina and Montgomery Ward. Interest in health foods started on the west and east coasts, but there are now a total of 2,500 specialty stores across the country and more and more big company outlets.

There has been an effort by some chains to introduce a "Health" or "Natural Food" section. As we mentioned in a previous article, some of these foods only claim to be organically grown is that they were probably grown in soil. A few of these "Health" foods tested higher in insecticide residues than regular samples of the same food. The N.Y. Times article said the private specialty stores will remain the most reliable source of good food, especially true organically grown.

The only thing that worries us is that when the big companies start opening more specialty health food stores, will the fast buck boys prevail in company policy? Right now there is no legal definition of "Health Food," "Natural" or "Organically Grown food." Several legislators have introduced bills in the U.S. House to legally define organically grown foods as only those grown without the use of chemical fertilizers or chemical insecticides, but as of now there is no control over use of the various labels. The roadside fruit stand that buys commercial cull tomatoes and puts them under the six foot sign that says "Organically Grown" is not committing a crime. The Sheriff could be standing at the bin when the culls were put on display and couldn't do a thing. It is imperative that we get national laws, or class action suits, to regulate this type of advertising or the whole organic movement will be blown by unscrupulous merchants.

After people buy some of the bogus food and sometimes at a premium price and it doesn't taste any better and they are still getting insecticide hangover, the interest in organic foods will die faster than it has developed.

Right now, all we have is faith to keep from being gyped by false advertising. We still have faith in the privately owned store whose owners will say who raised the fresh food they sell, but with big business getting into the act, we are very skeptical of megachain store integrity. There are just too many steps between buying twenty truck loads of carrots, say, through a carrot broker who can't get that many carrots from one grower and has to go to a number of growers or more probably to a wholesaler, whose word must be taken that all his growers are organic. Somewhere along the line will be one or more handlers who will not have the interest to be sure.

One thing the small specialty store could learn from the supermarkets is the proper care of fresh vegetables. The specialty store is inclined to display fresh vegetables as is, and any that are not sold quickly are left to wilt. Organically grown fresh vegetables have to look good as well as taste better to sell. Supermarkets have water vapor sprays that they use to keep the moisture content up in the produce section. A one dollar atomizer spray with fresh water will do the same thing, and if filtered rain water or distilled water is used it will do better than the big stores. Movement of water through plant tissue always goes from low concentration to high concentration (osmosis). The purer the water the better it will go into the plant and keep it plump (turgid) and fresh looking. The specialty store is so concerned not to do things under false pretenses that the owner might not want to do this. He might think it is fraudulent to make 10 hr. old vegetables look like fresh picked, but he need not worry about water. Water is nature's way of keeping the plant fresh looking but it rarely rains inside the store.

Los Tulares annexed to fire district

The Los Tulares subdivision, located just east of Carmel Valley Village, has been annexed to the Carmel Valley Fire Protection District, effective January 1, according to Fire Chief Chip Collins.

With this annexation, the chief reminds homeowners in Los Tulares that they must obtain burning permits for any type of outdoor burning. Permits are available, without charge, at the Fire Station on Via Contenta during business hours, 8:30 a.m. - 5 p.m. seven days a week.

Collins also reminds residents of Los Tulares that they may call 659-2021 for any regular business and reserve the 659-2221 exchange for fire and medical emergency calls.

New local columnists to appear in Outlook

SEVERAL new Carmel Valley columnists are making their debut in this week's issue of The Outlook.

Their appearance in print marks the start of an effort to expand the Outlook's coverage beyond the news stories and features which have already won the paper a first prize award for "General Excellence" from the California Newspaper Publishers Association.

Most of the new columns will appear on an every-other-week basis, depending somewhat on the individual writer.

Featured for the first time this week are columns by County Supervisor Willard Branson, whose fifth district encompasses Carmel Valley as far east as Los Tulares; Edna Kasch of Carmel Valley Manor; Helga White of Princes Camp in Cachagua; and Phil Smith, principal of Carmelo school.

The school principals' column will rotate among Tularcitos principal Tom Williams, Middle School principal Bob Whitehead, high school principal Kenneth Bullock, and Smith.

IN THE WEEKS TO COME, the Outlook will also run columns by John Sigourney, director of the Monterey Peninsula Regional Park and Conservation District; Bob Wehe, president of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce and the Carmel Valley Community Center; Phyllis Burns, owner of the Flower Bucket, who will report on the Village business community; and Hal Wright, who will contribute the latest news from Hacienda Carmel.

The Outlook is also starting a regular section on church news. All churches in the Valley have been invited to contribute information each week about upcoming services and special religious events.

Still more special reports may be added in the near future, to give Outlook readers the broadest possible view of the people and events which mark Carmel Valley.

The new columns are in addition to -- not in place of -- the regular columns which now appear in the paper. Mildred Hattan will continue to cover social events and various civic and church activities in Under the Oaks 'n Cacti. Lucy Smithson's illustrated comments on the care and training of horses, Judith Eisner's advice on animals in general, Lee Hall's organic gardening tips, Assemblyman Bob Wood's report from Sacramento, and the monthly news from the Carmel Valley Garden Club will appear on schedule.

Happy reading!

Court turns down amended lawsuit filed against Peace & Quiet group

Superior Court Judge E.J. Leach Jr. ruled Tuesday in favor of a demurrer filed by the Carmel Valley Committee for Peace and Quiet to an $11 million lawsuit filed against the committee by Al and Connie Hood, operators of the Carmel Valley airport.

The committee had petitioned the court to throw out the suit on the grounds that it did not state a cause for action.

In his brief ruling, Leach said that the amended complaint filed by the Hoods "may contain allegations" which could be a cause of action, but also included "surplus" allegations which could cause "confusion" if the case were brought to trial.

The amended complaint, filed in Dec. 1971, listed five general causes of action against several P&Q committee members. Most of the charges were based on a "fact sheet" circulated by the committee in June, 1970, regarding the alleged "expansion" of the Carmel Valley airstrip.

Judge Leach's ruling leaves open the possibility that the Hoods can file an amended version of their original suit against the committee in the future.

Odello ranch rezoned by Planning Commission as opponents continue stubborn resistance

By PAT GRIFFITH

THE MONTEREY COUNTY PLANNING Commission yesterday approved rezoning of the 292-acre Odello ranch to conform to the redevelopment plan approved for the property by the Board of Supervisors a week ago.

The commission approved a new zoning map for the property which will allow a 300 unit hotel and 298 condominiums on the eastern half of the ranch. A portion of the eastern acreage along the Carmel River, and all of the land west of Highway 1, were placed in a permanent open space district with design control.

The commission turned down a request by Bill Brown, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, to add flood plain zoning to the property. Brown contended that since flood plain zoning has been applied to the Carmel Lago and Riverwood developments on the north side of the Carmel River, it should also be put on the Odello development.

However, commission chairman Edward P. Marcucci said that the planners could not consider flood plain zoning because it had not been included in the recommendations of the supervisors.

THE SUPERVISORS will hold a public hearing before taking final action on the Odello rezoning next Tuesday at 1:30 p.m.

Although the rezoning was considered a "technical matter" in view of the supervisors' earlier approval of the entire redevelopment project, representatives of the Carmel Citizens Committee and the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club appeared in opposition to the proposed density.

Rod Holmgren, chairman of the Ventana chapter's conservation committee, read a statement which said, in part: "We understand the application for rezoning is based on the argument that since the western portion of the Odello lands has been saved for open space, it is all right to zone the eastern portion at a density far higher than that allowed by the present zoning.

"The argument is without foundation...The fact is that the public is buying the western Odello lands--flood plain lands--at a very generous price indeed, $1.7 million. Nobody has given any easement, nor has anyone dedicated any land to open space...

"Since the land is being bought, there is no basis of any kind for claiming that the developer has somehow earned a right to zone the eastern lands in cluster density."

On Tuesday this week, the supervisors also considered the Odello project as they voted 3 to 1 to hire the San Francisco firm of Blyth, Eastmen, Dillon and Co. as bond consultants.

UNDER PROVISIONS of the redevelopment project approved a week ago, increased tax revenues from the development of the eastern portion of the property will be used to retire approximately $550,000 in bonds which the county will sell to help buy the western 155 acres for open space.

Supervisor Warren Church, who voted against the redevelopment project also voted against the plan to hire bond consultants, which he termed "a developer's assistance plan."

On the recommendation of Supervisor Roger Poyner, the supervisors agreed to hold a meeting with the developer, Omega Properties Company Inc. of Kansas City; representatives of OLAF (the Odello Land Acquisition Fund); and the city of Carmel to discuss a specific timetable for development of the project.

OLAF and the city of Carmel have agreed to join the county and the state in purchasing the western portion of the ranch at a cost of $1.7 million.

The Odellos have indicated they hope to be able to lease back this property for several years to continue growing artichokes there.

Low-cost housing in Valley provokes heated discussion

MORE THAN 80 persons showed up for the general membership meeting of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association last night in anticipation of a rousing evening of debate with county officials over planning problems.

They didn't get it, because none of the three scheduled speakers showed up.

CVPOA president Bill Brown said he was informed at 4:30 p.m. yesterday that Supervisor Willard Branson could not come because of a conflicting AMBAG (Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments) meeting.

County Planning Director Ed DeMars also cancelled out because of the AMBAG meeting, and the third scheduled speaker, former planning commissioner Charles Kramer, was tied up in Santa Cruz with a meeting of the new Regional Coastal Commission.

Thus deprived of the opportunity to vent their feelings on such things as the Odello redevelopment plan, the members turned their attention to possible new areas of CVPOA concern for 1973.

Discussion ambled along amiably on such things as an expanded membership drive until Lydia Lewis, a mid-Valley resident, jolted the audience with the statement: "I'd like to see some provision made for low cost housing."

Under questioning, Mrs. Lewis suggested that a study might be made to pick out a few specific areas in the Valley for low-cost housing, just as commercial areas are now clearly defined.

Her comments received a generally frosty response, and several people protested that low income housing is economically unfeasible in the Valley and would result in an unacceptably high density.

THE SUBJECT was dropped until Herb Sherman of Eddy Road picked it up again.

"The feeling going around here is quite racist and quite false," he charged.

Sherman said that he had been involved in a lost-cost housing project that was clustered on a golf course, and said that such projects can be accomplished through federal subsidies.

"The federal government will subsidize the land cost, the housing cost and the people who live in them...These would be clusters of houses, not high rise, not slums, but open to people who otherwise can't live in Carmel Valley and would contribute to it."

"When you say 'the federal government,' remember that's you and me," shot back one retired man in the audience.

"Those people wouldn't even know how to use appliances if you put them in," retorted another.

"We don't want it," muttered a third.

"I think these people should be allowed in," Mrs. Lewis responded.

"Let's be realistic," Brown said from the podium. "The basic problems of Carmel Valley are sanitation, water and flood plain zoning. Until we can convey to the supervisors the fact that we have to have sanitation, we can't even consider low cost housing."

Lin Eldridge, incoming vice president of the CVPOA, commented:

"These things can't be laughed off. I think it's important for the board to listen and take a representative stand. If an individual has a viewpoint, he should be heard and it can be discussed."

ELDRIDGE SUGGESTED that Mrs. Lewis conduct a study herself on the feasibility of low cost housing in this area.

"Find out what the government is going to pay for land," he said. "Then the next step is to find out if people want it." Aside from the flurry over low-cost housing, the meeting was calm and good-humored.

St. E.P. Tyner asked CVPOA members to give greater support to convince the State Highway Division to construct a meandering, low-speed thoroughway up Hatton Canyon.

Unless the community pulls together behind a scenic road now, Tyner said, the traffic situation on Highway 1 will become so bad that, in desperation, residents will agree to accept anything proposed by the highway department. And that, Tyner said, would probably be a high-speed full-fledged freeway involving tremendous cuts through the steep, densely wooded canyon.

Several members urged the CVPOA to broaden its membership through a more active campaign.

As for Odello, Brown vowed: "We will fight for flood plain zoning before the supervisors."

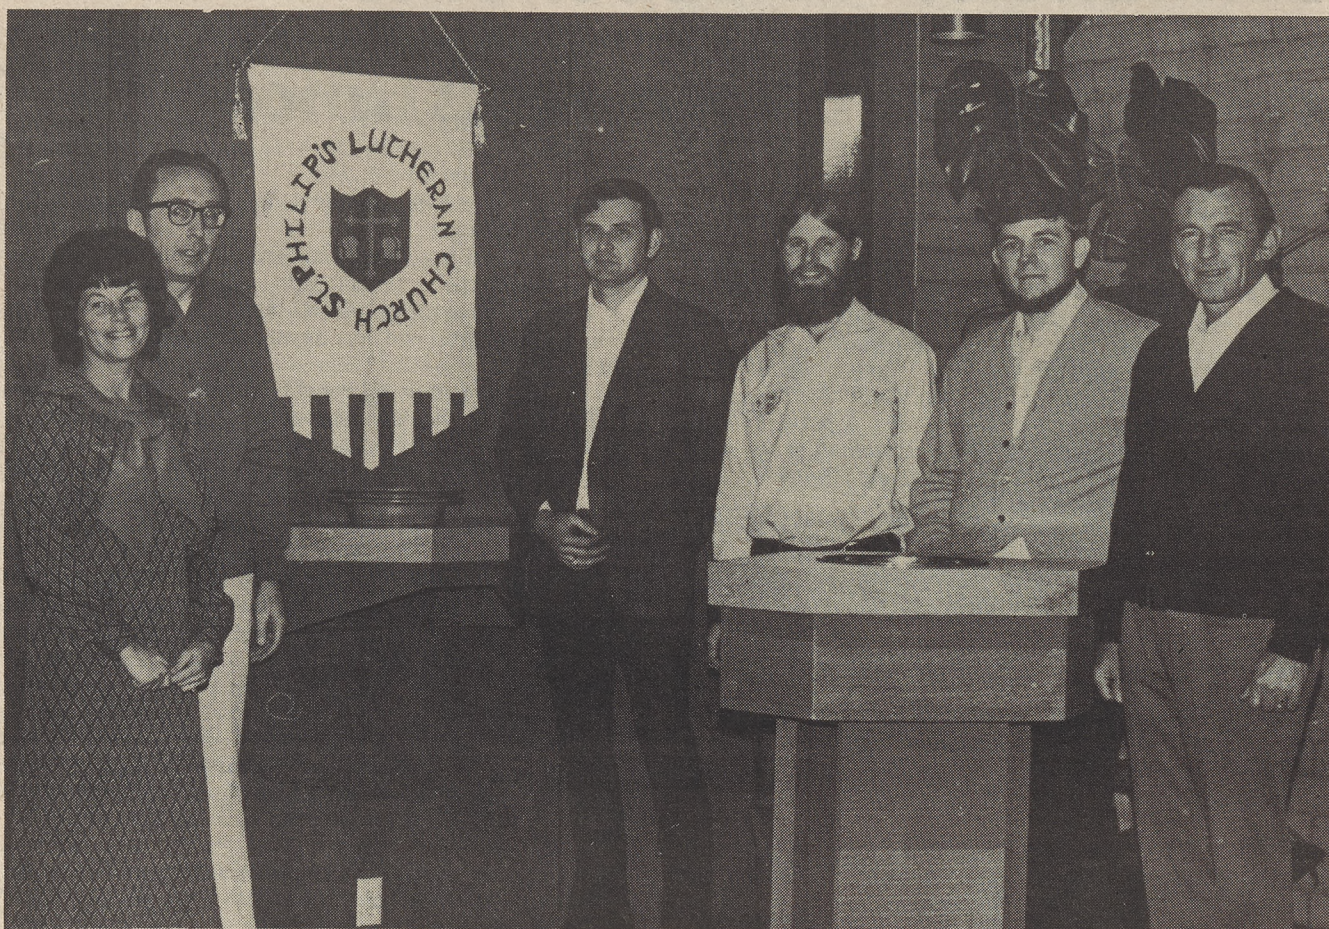

As the first order of business, members approved a slate of officers for 1973: Brown will again be president, Eldridge is vice president, Dolores Anderson is secretary and Karl Hall continues as treasurer.

Voted in as directors were Victoria Gibson, Mike Tancredi, Bob Marble and Betty Wilson for two-year terms; and Mary Sigourney, Almira Davis, Step Tyner, Roy Kaminske and George Sackman for one-year terms.

Sackman was a last-minute nomination from the floor to replace John Dowdakin, who told the meeting he could not accept re-election to the board because of a conflict with a course he will be teaching at MPC.

GARDENING NEWS

From the Carmel Valley Garden Association

The Carmel Valley Garden Association extends deepest apologies to the people who tried to find us last month when Lee Hall was our speaker. Due to a mixup of rooms at the school that night, we finally wound up in Room 27, too late to inform those who were trying to locate us.

However, something good must come out of the bad. Room 27 was so much better suited to our needs, we have obtained permission to use it for our meetings henceforth. It is situated in the row between the Multi Purpose room and the Library.

The next meeting of the Carmel Valley Garden Assn. will be held on Thursday, Feb. 8 at 8 p.m. in Room 27 at the Tularcitos School.

Paul Nielson, who is past President of the Landscape Gardening Association of Northern California, and charter member of the Horticulture Advisory Committee of Monterey Peninsula College and presently instructor of Horticulture there, will have a question and answer session on our frostbitten plants and what we should do for them in February. He will also speak about new ways to landscape, how to plan gardens that are different but will still require minimum care. Everyone is invited. Come, and bring a friend.

A NEW YEAR

The ideal soil is one which has good water-holding capacity and yet drains all excess of water. So far this year, we have double the rainfall compared to last year. Try to divert excess rainwater away from shrubs and trees. Soil saturated with water lacks air and that means suffocation for the roots, if it stays water-logged for a lengthy period. Also, trees are easily toppled down by wind in saturated soil.

It is time now to spray your deciduous trees while they are still dormant and without leaves. Use a safe dormant spray such as lime sulphur. Cover a fish pond, if it is under the trees, before starting to spray and clean the trees from dead twigs and old fruits, "mummies," and prune them moderately. Cover large cuts of one inch or more with pruning paint.

In a week or two those plants which were hit hard by the frost should tell you if they still have that precious spark of life or not. Let your heart rejoice with them if they do, and when you feel they are safe, clean and groom them. Give them a light meal of fish emulsion.

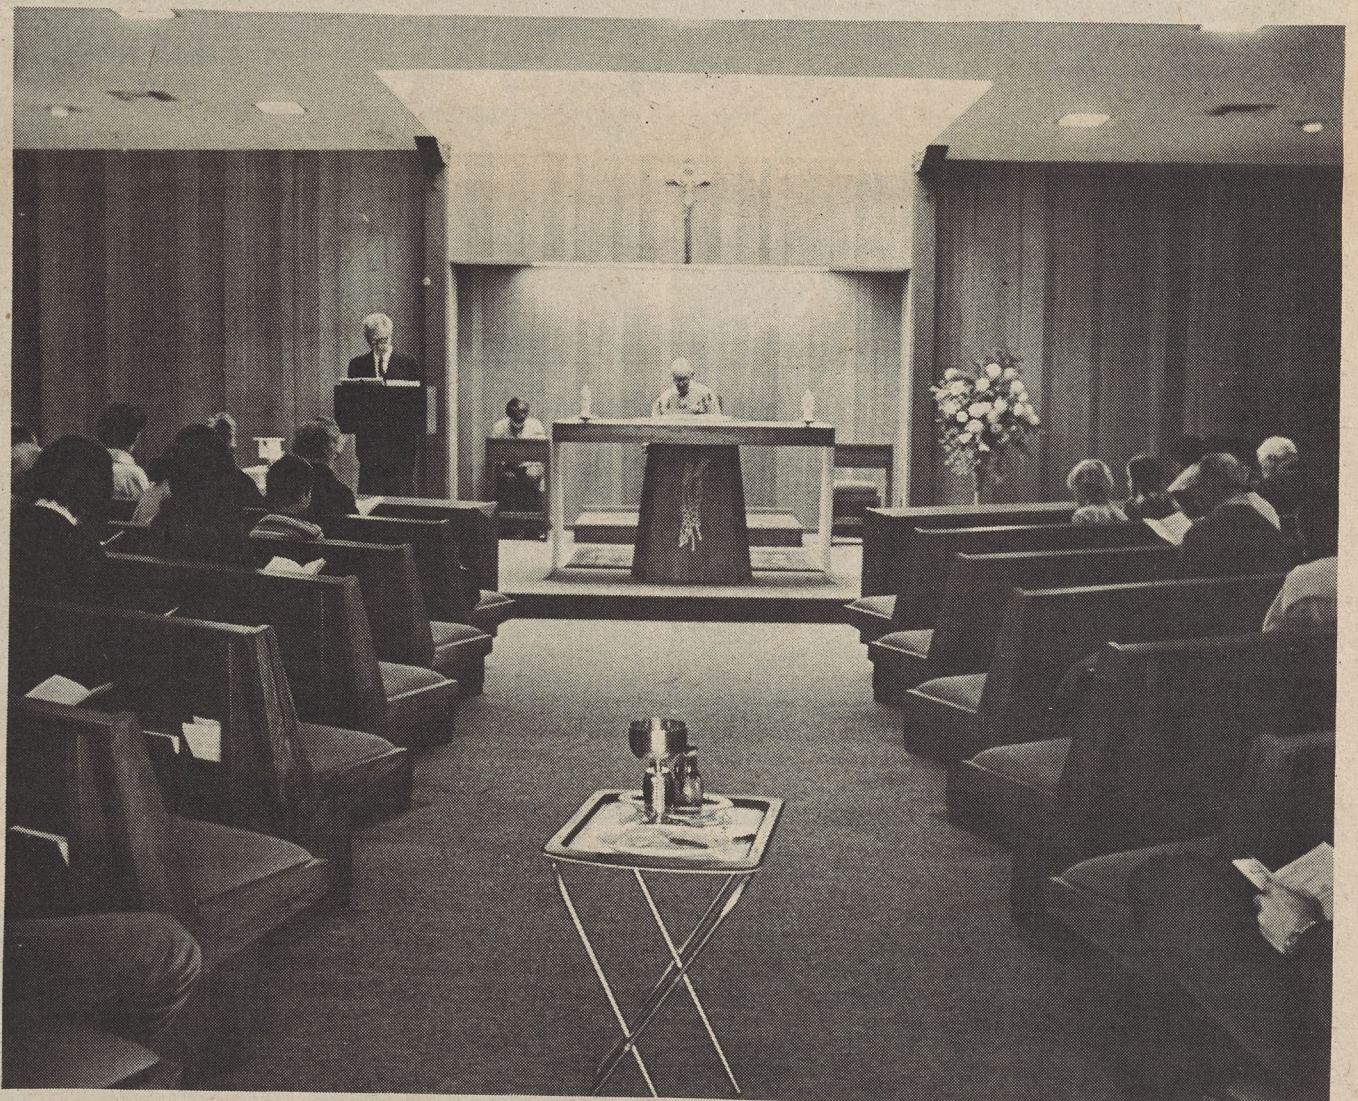

This year we will have a grand showing of wildflowers. Shooting stars are out now to be enjoyed. If you have children, instill in them love of these flowers of spring and teach them not to step on them, because they cannot defend themselves.

A BALMY CALIFORNIA winter's day -- the kind residents of their adopted state write home about -- lured Shellie Reade and her handsome Irish Setters, O'Roark, Libbie, and Redwells to the Carmel River adjacent to the eleven acres purchased recently by Shellie's mother, Mrs. Phyllis Reade. While their home is under construction on the Garzas Road River property, the Reades have established temporary quarters a Rancho Road home. When not wading with her water-dogs or training them for show in Field Trial competition, Shellie may be found in pre-nursing courses at Monterey Peninsula College. She plans to enter the Tacoma General Hospital School of nursing in Washington next fall.

First Korean Buddhist Temple in America...

Colorful dedication in Carmel Valley Sunday

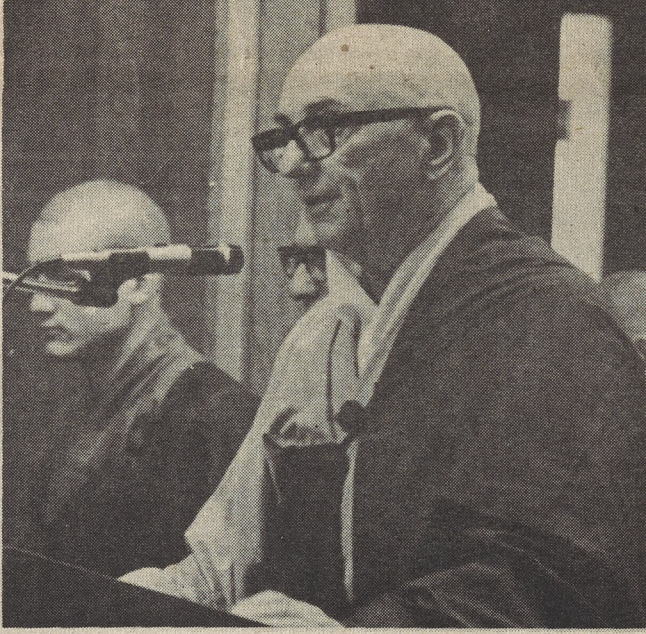

ROBED MONKS, including several who flew here from Korea for the occasion, await the "sounding of the gong" which opened the two-hour dedication ceremony. Guests were seated on bright cushions on the highly-polished teak parquet floor.

THE VEN. HAN SANG LEE greets Dee Dresser and her daughter, Kathy, before ceremonies start at the Buddhist Temple Sambosa. Lee has been the guiding light behind the construction of the temple in mid-Valley, and will live in a large home adjacent to it with his wife and six children.

THE AMERICAN-BORN DEAN of the University of Korea, the Ven. Dae-hye, was among the honored speakers. Others who addressed the opening-day crowd included the Korean consul general from San Francisco and Prof. Lewis Lancaster of the Department of Buddhist Studies at the University of California at Berkeley.

THE VEN. WON HA LEE of Korea added his congratulations on the completion of the first Korean Buddhist Temple in the United States.

AMONG SOME 350 guests at Sunday's opening service were Assemblyman Bob Wood, left center, and Carmel Mayor Bernard Anderson.

A WORLD FIGURE in Buddhism, Ven. Han Sang Lee tells the gathering that the temple represents for him the "turning away from the society that worships money to the introduction of the beautiful culture of Korea to Americans, providing a spiritual haven for Buddhists in this country." Lee spoke in Korean, and his remarks were then translated into English.

The first Korean Buddhist temple in the United States was dedicated Sunday morning on a sun-drenched plateau suspended between the Carmel River and the Santa Lucia mountains in mid-Carmel Valley.

About 350 guests, including a contingent of monks from Korea, filled the Temple Sambosa to overflowing for the two-hour service conducted in both Korean and English.

The graceful wooden structure is centered in a 7½ acre parcel to the west of Robinson Canyon Road. The site was carefully chosen by Han Sang Lee, a Korean Buddhist leader and former businessman and construction engineer, who has directed the project from its beginning.

A former editor-publisher of the Korean Buddhist newspaper, Lee is a wealthy philanthropist who has donated many buildings to his countrymen, including the UNESCO headquarters and a hydroelectric plant.

He is known as a leader in the youth movement among Buddhists, and has sponsored many scholarships and foundations in Korea.

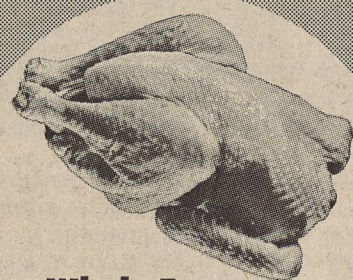

Lee, who speaks only Korean, will move his wife and six children into a rambling house adjacent to the temple in the near future. The living quarters will also have guest quarters for visiting monks, and will serve as a spiritual haven for Koreans in this country.

Services will be held at the temple each Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

The purpose and the goal, Lee told the opening day multitude, is "to embroider the culture of America with the beauty of Buddhism."

The View from Princes Camp

By HELGA R. WHITE

The Cachagua Advisory Committee submitted the following names to the Monterey County Planning Department for reappointment and one replacement, Sean Flavin, Mike Elliot, Jack Swanson, Rex White and Ken Fuller to replace Dave Fiscus, who has retired.

xxx

Congratulations to the members of the 4-H Club in the Cachagua area for gathering nearly 200 pounds of aluminum cans to buffer up their club's finances.

xxx

More than 60 persons enjoyed an informal gathering at Princes Camp Saturday evening to partake of a venison stew and polenta dinner. Venison stew was prepared by Helga White and the polenta was cooked to perfection by Domenic Orso (with the help of several strong arms on the stirring paddle). Many donations were made to the fund for the Carmel Valley Fire Dept. and ambulance crew.

Navy Frog Men in the Cachagua? So it seemed Sunday night at Princes Camp when three dripping rubber-suited figures appeared, the bar was reopened to let them in to dry off and warm up. Seems that four stalwart males from the Navy Postgraduate School were "shipwrecked" somewhere below the Syndicate Camp when the four attempted to "navigate" the swollen Carmel River in rubber life rafts. After the four "abandoned ship," one of the party climbed to a high ridge to summon aid and eventually made his way to San Clemente Dam where he reported his three shipmates as lost.

Back up at Princes Camp, the three who were reported as lost were making several frantic phone calls and eventually called the authorities to report the one who was to bring help as lost, only to find out that no one was really lost.

Happy to hear this good news, the three went squishing on their way, probably trying to figure out a way to explain how the rubber life rafts, oars, etc., were lost. Now I'm lost!

The Carmel Valley Ambulance Crew were called Sunday evening to give aid to Mrs. Ray Tangen, a resident of Jensen's Trailer Park in Cachagua. Mrs. Tangen was taken to Community Hospital by ambulance.

Until next time...

Dentists to visit local schools

for Dental Health Week

Local dentists will be visiting elementary schools next week to give special programs on proper dental care as part of Children's Dental Health Week.

The theme for this year's educational effort is "Plaque-Free in '73". Plaque, as children will be finding out, is the sticky film that forms continuously on teeth and which, if not brushed off every day, causes tooth decay and gum disease.

Dentists have discovered that a majority of children have some form of gum disease. If this isn't controlled in childhood, adult gum problems can become insurmountable.

Dentists who will be discussing teeth and their care in Carmel schools are: Dr. Walt Patton, Capt. Cooper School; Dr. John Gardiner, Carmelo School; Dr. Jay Goble, River School; Dr. John Von Berg, Tularcitos School; and Dr. Wilbert Manke, Woods School.

NORMAN B. HOLMES, C.S.B., a Christian Science lecturer and teacher from Chicago, will speak on "The Answer to Despair" Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Sunset Auditorium.

'The Answer to Despair' title of Tuesday lecture

There is a sure way out of discouragement and despair, according to a public lecture entitled "The Answer to Despair," to be held in Carmel Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Norman B. Holmes, C.S.B., a Christian Science lecturer and teacher from Chicago, will draw on his experience as a Chaplain in the United States Navy in explaining how discouragement and despair can be faced up to and overcome on a spiritual basis.

At the invitation of First Church of Christ Scientist, Carmel, Mr. Holmes will speak in Sunset Auditorium. Marjorie V. Timmins, second reader of the Carmel church will introduce him. The public is invited to attend without charge.

Mr. Holmes will tell of the overcoming of many forms of despair including those associated with serious problems of human relationship, as well as physical disease and impairment.

A graduate of Northwestern University, Mr. Holmes served in the United States Navy as a Chaplain during World War II and the Korean War. He entered the healing ministry of Christian Science in 1946 and became a Christian Science teacher in 1958. Prior to his becoming a member of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, he served as Manager of the Department of Branches and Practitioners of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. He is currently on extensive lecture tour.

Will Odello development need permit from new coastal commission?

CHARLES B. KRAMER, chairman of the Regional California Coastal Zone Conservation Commission, said this week that it may be necessary to get a legal opinion from the State Attorney General on whether or not the 598-unit Odello development will need a permit from the commission.

Kramer said it is his understanding that the eastern portion of the Odello ranch, on which the construction would be located, probably lies beyond the 1000-yard coastal zone for which permits are automatically required.

"But what I don't know," Kramer said, "is whether because this entire property is being developed under the State Urban Renewal Act, it would be considered a unit development and therefore need a permit. This is a legal question, and one which will undoubtedly require an opinion from the Attorney General."

The commission, which met Wednesday in Santa Cruz, has set Feb. 15 as the deadline for accepting applications for staff positions, including the post of executive director. With the exception of executive director, all positions will be subject to State Civil Service regulations.

Applications should be mailed to the California Coastal Zone Conservation Committee, Central Coast Region, P.O. Box 463, Santa Cruz, 95061.

The commission has temporary offices in the Santa Cruz County Governmental Center, and the director of the Santa Cruz County Planning Commission is serving as a temporary executive secretary.

Kramer said the regional commission is proceeding with the adoption of initial policies "as fast as it can."

He said the State Commission is expected to adopt a permit application form at its next meeting on Feb. 7, and that the regional commission will meet shortly thereafter to approve the guidelines and establish a procedure for processing applications.

"The matter of single family dwellings within the coastal permit area will have first priority," he said.

Kramer said he has heard from many people who have been stopped from building homes within the 1000-yard line because they have so far not been able to get a permit from the new commission.

"There seems to be a substantial number of people who already have received their local permits who are now being delayed because banks and other lending institutions won't lend them money until they have their permit from our commission," he explained.

"We hope to inconvenience these people as little as possible. We want to move on these permits as fast as we can."

No applications for permits will be accepted until specific procedures have been approved.

Carmelo Parent-Faculty Club to hear Dr. Whipple Febr. 8

The Carmelo Parent-Faculty Club will meet Feb. 8 at 7:30 p.m. at the Carmelo School library.

Dr. David R. Whipple will speak on "Somebody Has to Pay For the School," the Reagan-Moretti Bill and other proposals.

Dr. Whipple has a PhD in economics and is an associate professor in Operations Research, Naval Postgraduate School. His major research interests are health economics, job search problems and public good. He is married and has three children, two of whom attend Carmelo.

Tularcitos offers second chance to mark bikes

The Tularcitos student council will sponsor a second bicycle identification clinic next Wednesday from 1:30 to 5 p.m. on the upper level playground of the school.

All Valley residents are invited to bring their bicycles for free engraving of their driver's license or social security numbers, to aid in reclaiming the bike if it should be stolen.

Olin T. Davis, community relations specialist for the Monterey County Sheriff's Department and a crew of student council and parent volunteers marked 91 bikes on Wednesday this week in spite of the rain.

How to drive better -- and safely -- in Carmel Valley . . .

Nicholsons hold special classes on how it can be done

By PAT GRIFFITH

CARMEL VALLEY drivers are forever complaining about each other. During the course of any drive along Carmel Valley Road, it seems, there is usually someone poking along at 35 mph or passing around curves or hugging the bumper of the car in front.

What all Valley motorists need--errant drivers or not--is a quick course in defensive driving.

There is such a course, sponsored by the National Safety Council, which is taught locally by two people who know the hazards of Carmel Valley Road from daily experience, Aloys and Novella Nicholson of Scarlett Road.

On Wednesday morning the Nicholsons finished giving the very practical course to 62 residents of Del Mesa Carmel, the largest class they have taught since moving to the Valley in 1967.

The 8-hour course is built around a student workbook and defensive driver's manual published by the National Safety Council. Each chapter is keyed to an hour-long discussion on a particular topic, such as how to avoid a collision with the vehicle ahead or behind, how to avoid an intersection collision, how to pass--and be passed--safely.

The Nicholsons supplement the workbook with films and their own driving experience, gleaned from years of successful survival on the Los Angeles freeway system. Nicholson taught driver education for Los Angeles schools for 26 years, and Mrs. Nicholson was director of secondary education in Burbank during the same period.

Although freeway driving is not the major concern in this area that it is around San Francisco or Los Angeles, there are many other specific driving hazards which the Nicholsons discussed at great length with the Del Mesa residents.

SEVERAL TIMES Nicholson pinpointed the Valley Hills Shopping Center-Valley Greens Drive intersections with Carmel Valley Road as the most dangerous traffic situation in this area.

"There are three driveways opening onto the road right there, plus Valley Greens Drive, and cars are crossing the road in bunches in all directions. There is no doubt that that is the most dangerous spot of all because there are so many things to watch out for and so many combinations of potential problems."

Throughout the course, the Nicholsons put the emphasis on how to avoid creating an accident, as well as how to avoid getting entangled in someone else's mistake.

At the signalized intersection of Carmel Valley Road and Carmel Rancho Blvd., for example, Nicholson pointed out that too much caution and delay will aggravate, rather than help, the traffic pattern.

"We have the most sophisticated signal lights there are at that intersection," he explained. "The green light will favor the Valley Road. The green left-turn arrow won't come on until an electronic eye picks up a car in the left-hand turning lane, and then it will stay on only as long as there is a steady line of cars making the turn."

"So if you are getting ready for a left turn into the shopping center there, and you just mosey along, there will be a 'break' in the pattern and the green arrow will disappear. Then you will be holding up all the other cars behind you that wanted to turn left."

SHE HAS LEARNED how to be a "defensive driver," and now Mrs. Walter L. Stevens is about to receive a little extra post-graduate instruction in parallel parking from veteran driving teacher Aloys Nicholson, left. Several of her fellow residents at Del Mesa Carmel are standing by for their turn

"You are obligated to move right in there and keep traffic moving."

One woman in the audience said that she had problems when she was on Carmel Rancho Blvd. and planning to turn right to go east on Carmel Valley Road.

"People are always honking at me to get out there and turn right even when the light is red," she complained.

"YOU DON'T HAVE to make the turn if you don't feel it is safe," Nicholson assured her. "But at the same time, there is no real reason for not making it when there isn't traffic going by. You have a lane to turn into there, and you aren't blocking other cars moving through the intersection."

"The real purpose of signals is to keep traffic moving. If you hold up traffic, you aren't making it safe."

As a general rule to follow when considering a right hand turn against a red light, he continued, the driver should do "what is reasonable and prudent. If you don't interfere with another car or a pedestrian, go."

A question about making right hand turns against signals in Carmel brought the laughing response: "There are no signals in Carmel. Where have you been driving?"

Pedestrians, however, are a serious consideration in behind the wheel. The official defensive driving course is based on lectures, films and discussions, but Nicholson and his wife often help individuals improve specific driving skills upon request. (photo by George T.C. Smith)

Carmel and every other congested business area, Nicholson agreed.

"In a congested area, I suggest being on the conservative side and making as few right turns against a red light as possible."

Nicholson was also asked about passing when driving north on Highway 1.

"If there is a lot of traffic, say around commute time, there is no need to pass, because you'll just sit up at the stoplight anyway," he replied. "But at other times, a slow-moving truck or other vehicle will often pull over to the right so you can go by. But you have to watch out for possible traffic coming out from Mesa and Atherton on the left. If you pass, be sure you have adequate clearance."

Highway 1 also poses problems for drivers headed south, when it narrows from two lanes to one just below the Ocean Ave. light. Several drivers were uncertain about which car should have the right of way.

"The reasonable and prudent person would say that the cars should take turns in that situation," Nicholson said. "Of course, if the drivers want to argue about it, they can always go side by side for some distance."

In terms of actual "right" to go first, Nicholson said, the car on the inside or left-hand lane should be accorded that position, because the car in the right-hand lane has a longer distance to travel to merge left.

"In practice, the timid person waits and the bold one shoots ahead," he commented. "Or if they're both bullheads, you have an argument."

"But there are so many tourists driving along there who don't know the rules," complained one man.

ANSWERED NICHOLSON with a smile: "It is always good advertising for a community for the local driver to let in the visitor and smile and wave at him and send him on his way."

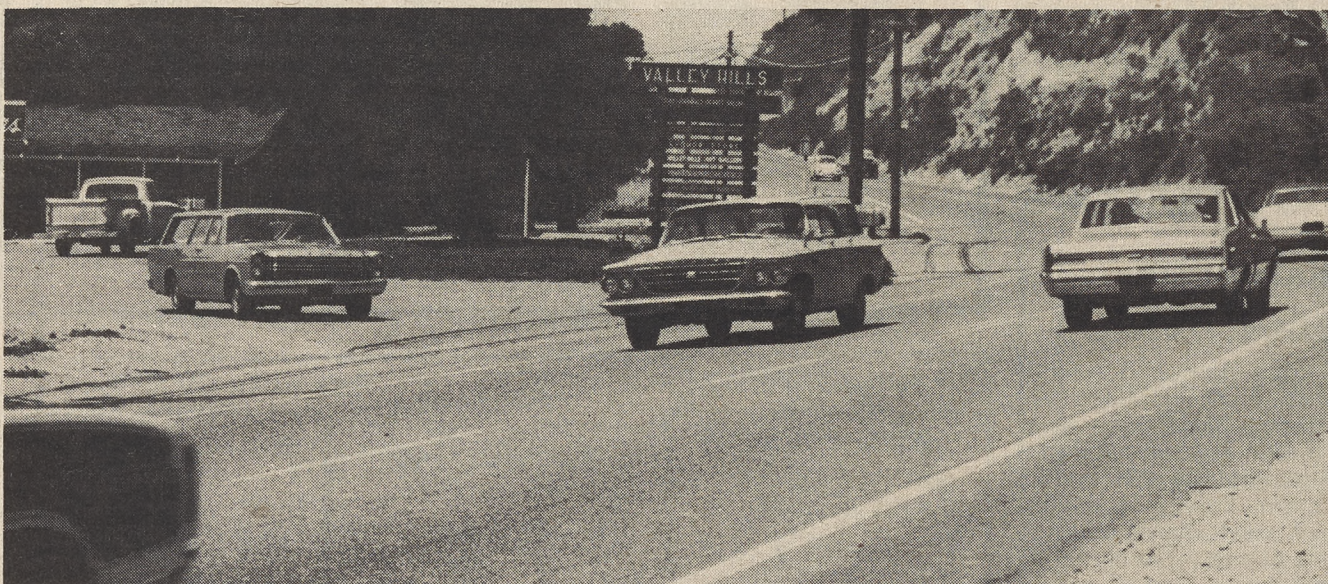

The defensive driver course at Del Mesa was sponsored by the National Retired Teachers Association and the American Association of Retired Persons.

Residents who belonged to either group paid only a $1 fee for the 56-page workbook. Non-members were charged $4, a fee which goes to the National Safety Council to cover the cost of course materials, which also include films and other visual aids.

The Nicholsons provide their team-teaching instruction without charge. In recent years, they have given classes for groups throughout the Monterey Peninsula and Salinas.

THEIR COURSE has been sponsored, at one time or another, by the Alliance on Aging, the Carmel Foundation, Hacienda Carmel and assorted civic groups. They have also

THE MOST DANGEROUS SPOT on Carmel Valley Road is right along here, according to driver education experts Novella and Aloys Nicholson. Most motorists would agree. Cars turn in every possible direction here against fast-moving traffic and compound a dangerous situation by going slowly when they drive west up a long hill, frequently forcing cars going the legal 55 mps to brake to a near-halt. This area is a popular destination point for tourists, who add unfamiliarity with the roads and driveways to the general confusion.

OHMYGOSH . . . Gene Bradley has something of a sinking feeling when he first saw the mountain that slid into his patio two weeks ago.

Our heavy rains of two weeks ago caused concern to many residents along the river.

But they produced something more than that for some hillside dwellers.

Teri and Gene Bradley awoke one morning to find that the small patio behind their home on Middle Canyon Road had been rudely invaded by a mud slide, a slide which came within inches of their sliding glass doors.

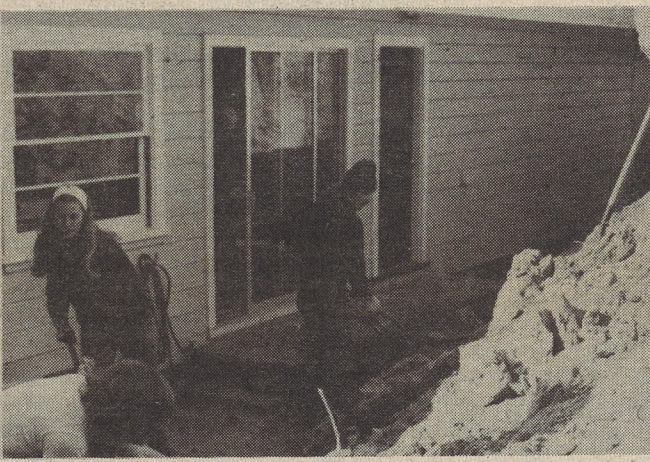

Undaunted, they called friends, stocked up on beer and pizza, and spent a long Sunday moving a mountain out of their patio. Along the way, the Bradleys took pictures to record the Slide that Was.

Mudslide endangers Carmel Valley home

AFTER SEVERAL HOURS of work, made possible by infusions of beer and pizza, the outlines of the original retaining wall start to reappear. Digging away at the slide are David Covell, John Gardiner and Craig Zalenka. The friendly encouragement is coming from Barbara Zalenka and Zita Gardiner.

FRIENDS of both sexes provided the manpower necessary to move a mountain. Carol Covell and Craig Zalenka are wielding shovels while Zita Gardiner kibitzes from the doorway.

BY DAY'S END, the mountain had been whittled back to size, and chunks of the retaining wall were set back in place by David Covell and John Gardiner.

HOW TO DRIVE BETTER...

given classes in the Steinbeck Memorial Library in Salinas.

"All we need are 12 or more people who are interested, and we will be happy to put on a course," Nicholson says. Classes normally are scheduled for four successive days, two hours a day.

Nicholson notes that the course is given on many military bases, and Fort Ord is the top military participant in the nation, followed by the San Diego Recruit Training Command.

The Union Oil Company of California's Northwest Division has reported a 50 percent decrease in chargeable accidents since it started defensive driving courses for its employees in early 1970.

Although there is no way to measure it, Nicholson thinks that the course may have helped contribute to the nine percent drop in traffic fatalities in Monterey County last year—a decline which has also been credited to tougher surveillance by the California Highway Patrol and safer automobiles.

"For the older driver in particular," Nicholson says, "we tell them that they don't have time to wait for improved cars and safer highways. They have to do something right now, and about all they can do is learn to improve their own attitudes and reactions."

Unlike most of us, the Nicholsons seem to practice what they preach.

Neither has ever been involved in any accident or, so far as they know, caused one to happen.

Mrs. Nicholson has no traffic citations or violations on her record.

He has been found guilty just once—of parking overtime in Carmel.

Carmel Lago given 2 more years to complete 44 units

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Planning Commission yesterday granted Carmel Lago an additional two years in which to start construction of its second increment of 44 condominiums.

The developer's request for more time was supported by the subdivision committee of the planning department. The original tentative map, approved in August, 1971, would have expired on Feb. 11.

Planning Director Ed DeMars told commissioners that the only question involved in the requested time extension "is whether or not you're satisfied with the way unit No. 1 went in. If you're not, then the application should be resubmitted."

This was in reference to the 48 condominiums which have been constructed. Last year they provoked a major controversy over color and outdoor lighting fixtures.

In moving to approve the time extension, commissioner Leon Stutzman commented: "I would hope that we would not have problems with the next phase of the project."

Also appearing as a last-minute addition to the commission's agenda was a request of Arbor Development Company regarding payment of a recreational-in-lieu fee to the county.

Carl Hooper of George Bestor & Associates told the commission that the developer is providing an easement of 1/4 mile for a public riding and hiking trail, and therefore should be considered exempt from the fee requirement.

Under the county's subdivision ordinance, a developer is required to pay a fee based on a percentage of the value of the land unless part of the property is dedicated for public recreational use.

THE QUESTION touched off a 30-minute discussion of the ordinance and whether or not recreational facilities for Riverwood residents, such as a clubhouse, tennis courts and picnic area, fit the intent of the subdivision ordinance.

Deputy County Counsel Roy Anderson advised the commission that in his opinion, if a developer satisfies the recreational needs for the people living within the project, he qualifies for an exemption from the fee.

"I think they have satisfied the recreational needs of Riverwood," agreed commissioner Vaughn Parsons. "To me it is absurd to require them to provide for the recreational needs of the public."

Outgoing commission chairman Edward Marcucci moved that the development be found to comply with the recreational provisions of the ordinance, thereby waiving the in-lieu fee. The motion was passed unanimously.

Wednesday was Marcucci's last day as chairman of the commission. Darrell Bengard of King City was elected the new chairman, and Mrs. Nora Hare was chosen vice-chairman.

In stepping down from his presiding role, Marcucci presented Bengard with a gavel engraved with the initials of all the previous chairman of the planning commission.

In still another action, the Commission approved the new green and gold sign for the Carmel Valley Inn. The Upper Valley Advisory Committee had recommended denial of the design approval.

By LUCY SMITHSON

SOME DAYS the only thing that keeps a horselover loving horses is the thought of good times to come. Neither rain nor sleet nor gloom of night will discourage our favorite fantasies. Someday soon the sun will shine; the ground will be springy turf instead of mud. There will be trail rides, wildflowers, horse shows, blue ribbons.

A lot of these daydreams involve putting the horse in a trailer and taking him somewhere. If you don't currently have a trailer, don't you wish you had?

When shopping for a trailer, it helps to have a particular horse in mind. Some trailers have such low roofs that only a bulldog-type Quarter Horse can be comfortable in them. Everybody else has to keep his head down. This really strains the withers, the back and shoulder muscles, because a horse needs his head to balance the sway and jiggle of the trailer. If he forgets the low roof or throws his head anyhow, Thwack! Another vet bill, another lay off.

Unless the price is irresistible, don't buy a one-horse trailer. You may think you don't need a double trailer but you will use the extra space once you have it. It's space to haul hay, space for a camp cot on those two-day outings, space for the pony cart when you haul the pony, space for the pony when your riding horse won't get into the trailer without him. Besides, having a horse trailer means instant popularity. There's always someone else who wants to go too, and you'll find you often haul an extra horse for your friends.

Consider the source of the trailer. Most two-horse trailers are factory built and pretty well, too. But many one-horse trailers begin as a backyard do-it-yourself project for some guy who doesn't want to lay out the money for a real trailer. Do you really want a one-horse trailer that's been home made from discarded oil drums and a 1937 Studebaker axle?

IN CALIFORNIA, you have to have a rear view mirror on both sides of your hauling vehicle. You have to have signal lights on the trailer and tail lights at night. You have to have fenders over the wheels and a safety chain closed by something stronger than a snap.

For pulling a horse trailer you ought to have a load equalizer type of trailer hitch or a sway bar. Anyone who hauls horses with a bumper hitch has to be working for the dog food company. You need a big car or truck for pulling horses. It's not the power for going uphill that's critical; it's having a heavy enough vehicle to hold the horse trailer back going downhill. For the same reason, it helps to have a standard (non-automatic) transmission and independent brakes on the trailer. A loaded horse trailer can push you down a hill while you're praying that none of the traffic in front of you stops.

Lift up the rubber mats and check the flooring. Wooden floors rot out. We've heard a gory story about a horse who had one foot on the ground for 200 miles.

Door latches have a way of getting sprung during the life of the trailer. This process accelerates after they get a little bit off and the owner bangs them with a hammer to open and close them.

How about the height of the trailer hitch? Trailers are designed so that the heavy end is in front. If a trailer is back-end heavy, it will sway and can even tip you over. Last week I saw a low trailer hooked to a high truck hitch. The angle between the trailer and truck was an upside down "v." Everytime the rig bottomed through a chuck hole the poor horse inside had to scramble uphill.

Horses like some trailers better than others. It's not always his fault if he's difficult to load. They say the best way to load a horse is six weeks before you go. That's a way of saying you should teach the horse to like his trailer and take your time about it. Feed him in the trailer. Give him short trips around the neighborhood. This makes him more philosophical about taking a ride from a human instead of giving one.

But many horses who have started their trailering career quietly later turn into scramblers or leaners or become hard to load. Something about riding in the trailer has made him unhappy. We recommend that everyone who hauls a horse take a test ride in his trailer.

TO PLAY FAIR, you shouldn't use your hands to hold onto the trailer. The horse doesn't. Ask your driver to drive a course that includes turns, stops, and hills. You may find that your rig sways or vibrates. Mushy springs may be turning every stop into a bop on the nose. Maybe there's a noisy ventilator or a flapping tarp. Maybe a stream of air blows the dust in the manger up the horse's nostrils.

Maybe the trailer is really ok and it's the driver who's at fault. Pulling a horse trailer calls for different driving techniques than pulling a house trailer. A little tap on the brakes before a curve or stop warns the horse to sit back on the tail chain and brace himself. A highway curve that is tight enough to have recommended speed signs posted deserves special care. A horse trailer should take the curve ten miles per hour slower than the recommended speed for passenger cars. That means horse trailers should go around Porter's curve at 15 mph because the posted speed for cars is 25 mph. A right angle turn at a corner should be made at no more than 5 mph.

Hauling around corners too fast probably causes a lot of trailer fighters. A common driver fault is to speed up when the car or truck has rounded the corner, forgetting that the trailer hasn't straightened out yet. This gives the horse a jerk and throws him against the side of the trailer instead of the tail chain. It just has to be terrifying.

Open house Sunday at ABC House

Carmel's Committee for A Better Chance (ABC) welcomes the Peninsula community to an open house Sunday, 1-4 p.m. at the ABC residence, 24324 San Juan, Carmel.

ABC, now in its second year on the Peninsula, feels it is time to have the community see the program in action, up close, by meeting the boys.

"This also gives the boys a chance to get acquainted with more members of the community," says Mrs. Lou Wolfe, community relations chairman.

The open house is also designed to provide information to those who still may have questions about the ABC program, which brings boys out of disadvantaged high schools to do college preparatory study at Carmel High School.

The nine students now participating in the program will be on hand to explain their particular reason for being in ABC.

The membership drive for ABC is now underway and new members may obtain membership at the open house.

For further information call 659-2161 or 624-5068.

Signs to the ABC House will be posted on Serra Avenue and on Carpenter Street.

Planners forging new area plan after hearing from cities, county

By JORUNE JONIKAS

"We hope to be able to satisfy as many jurisdictions as possible," but if the preliminary area plan can't satisfy all of them, "we have to live with that fact of life," Area Planning Commission chairman Robert Franco commented during the commission's brief meeting last Thursday in Monterey's council chamber.

After member jurisdictions formally presented their suggested changes to the plan, Franco appointed a committee headed by Leon Stutzman, a county planning commissioner from Monterey, to "sift through the reports" and see to what extent the changes can be incorporated into the preliminary version of the updated document.

Franco directed the committee (composed of city councilmen Gerald Fry of Monterey, Billie Barton of Seaside, William Shirey of Pacific Grove and Olof Dahlstrand of Carmel) to meet with Larry Wise of Hahn, Wise and Associates, the commission's planning consultants, and report to the full commission at a special meeting Feb. 15.

At the special meeting, Franco explained, the commission will discuss the report prior to eventual adoption of the area plan as amended. If acceptance is not voted on at that meeting, he continued, then the commission will meet again Feb. 22.

Carmel Planning Commissioner Charles McEwen read a report adopted by both the planning commission and the city council. Both bodies asked that the preliminary plan "contain a statement on the impact of the transient population with supporting figures if possible; that basic typographical errors be corrected; that the general plan map show Rio Road properly aligned from one side of Highway 1 to the other; an explanation be made as to the proposed road on the west side of Highway 1 and south of Rio Road; that the Odello property on the west side of Highway 1 be indicated on the Plan as Open Space, but that in no case less restrictive zoning than at present, and that every effort be made to restore the shopping center area at the mouth of Carmel Valley to that envisioned in Carmel's General Plan and consistently recommended by this City."

The city of Monterey recommended: "The Skyline Forest and Woodridge Acres subdivisions should be changed from Urban Residential to Suburban Residential; In Del Monte Grove, the Suburban Residential areas on both sides of the greenway and the Multiple Family Residential adjoining Laguna Grande Lake should be changed to Urban Residential; Show the Skyline Elementary School site as a proposed park site addition to Veteran's Memorial Park, and In Cannery Row, add McAbee Beach and San Carlos Beach (adjoining the breakwater) as proposed park areas."

In addition to several zoning corrections for the city of Del Rey Oaks, that city's city council recommended that "areas for recreation such as beaches and mountains should have easier access; that some kind of area control of land already in use should be included. Affairs that create noise pollution for residents in surrounding areas such as happens with the fairgrounds and the airport need consideration; that references regarding methods for raising money should be left out of this document; that the size (of the document) could be reduced considerably by eliminating much of the rhetoric."

The Monterey County Planning Commission report stated: "The success or failure of the plan relates to the Rural Planned Community approach and the critical review procedure. As it is presently suggested, the incentives program seems impractical because it is subjective and therefore difficult not to give total additional density credit. Our recommendation is that the areas having slopes less than 30 percent should have an overall density of one unit per acre. Those areas with slopes of more than 30 percent would have an allowable density of one unit for each 2½ acres; however, this density could be increased as much as 75 percent of the number of units in the 2½ acre category if approved by an appropriate preview committee with the density compensations (incentives) without trying to give individual credit for each item complied with. This would be determined by a preview committee which would report on the merits of the proposals, thereby designating the number of extra units at the time of review based on the merits of each development."

The county's other suggested improvements for the plan are: "Elements of community value must be determined or located before the project is designed so that they may be considered at its final layout. Although the map 'Elements of Community Value' on page 20 attempts to identify these values, it should be emphasized that this does not include all areas or objects that should be preserved.

"Also, it should be clarified on both the map and in the text that the permanent open space designations are neither finite or all inclusive. Limited development may be permitted where it relates to, is compatible with, and provides the best means for safeguarding these values.

"Nor should it be the intent of the plan to imply that areas not shown in permanent open space must be sacrificed to development when found, through close inspection, to have open space or community value; for the intent of the plan must be to retain the natural topography, vegetation and scenic beauty of the area as far as possible."

The report also suggests that "existing grading ordinance provisions should be expanded to include site and appearance considerations; the park provisions should be expanded to consider areas such as those on the perimeter of Jacks Peak Park for acquisition for limited picnic and camping facilities; the recommendation on Hatton Canyon Highway should indicate that it will have grade separations and be developed as a non-access facility; an additional section should be provided to preserve and enhance the research and educational facilities within the area; either the text or maps should indicate a basic density on all property covered; and the map should be changed to show base densities on all properties, reflect Carmel Highlands and the Coast Master plans and also resolve conflict between this plan and the Tri-County Coastline Report south of Carmel River, include corrections in the shopping center at the mouth of Carmel Valley as to density and road layout, include all of Laguna Seca Lake in the open space designations."

Other suggestions in the report included: reviewing the Carmel Valley base densities; reviewing the agricultural densities and defining them; reviewing justification for the proposed shopping center in Tarpey Flat area south of the Monterey Peninsula Airport; developing a housing section; and deleting the section on regional government.

Pacific Grove objected to Ocean View Boulevard being designated as a scenic highway and Shirey commented, "since they (Hahn, Wise and Associates) set up our circulation plan and also the area plan, we wonder whether they know what they're doing."

According to Mrs. Burke, Seaside took the position that "no further development be allowed on the flood plain at the mouth of Carmel Valley."

She added, too, that Seaside's city council felt that the area plan "did not address itself to the housing problem—low and moderate income housing for the Monterey Peninsula."

When it was Sand City's turn to present its recommendations, Phil Calabrese, the city's mayor, told the commission that Sand City wants no part of the area plan.

"As far as Sand City is concerned, with the lack of cooperation we've received from Mr. Wise, we want to be left alone with our zoning the way it is," Calabrese said.

Calabrese also pointed out that all of Sand City is under the jurisdiction of the state and regional coastline protection commissions and told the commissioners "we have enough problems" and as far as the city is concerned, it wants the zoning left as is.

The consultants have proposed open space zoning for most of the Sand City waterfront, which has been zoned by the city for future development.

Bill Curry of the Monterey County Planning Department told the commission that "the last area plan was adopted with qualifications from jurisdictions." He was referring to the area plan adopted in 1966. Acceptance with qualifications would mean that the member governments accept the general idea of the plan but object to specific features.

Wise then commented that the commission should "try to get as much unanimity as possible." Wise said that in his interpretation, if the jurisdiction adopts the plan differently than the county, then that plan with its exceptions, becomes that specific city's plan.

All the state wants, Wise continued, is "consistency" and "exceptions don't necessarily mean inconsistency." As an example, he said that if a general plan designates an area for duplexes, it probably could be zoned for apartments without conflicting with the intent of the State Planning Act, which requires that by July 1, the actual zoning of an area and its designation in an area plan be consistent.

He interpreted consistency as meaning "you can't go directly contrary."

The area planning commission's committee will make its report at a special meeting of the commission scheduled for Feb. 15 in Colton Hall, Monterey. If the area planners do not adopt a final version of the plan at that meeting, it will adjourn for one more week to Feb. 22, the regular meeting date.

After the area planning commission adopts the report, it will again go back to the county and to the various Peninsula cities for review and adoption. After further amendments are suggested, it then goes to the county planning commission and finally the board of supervisors for public hearings and final adoption.

Petpourri

By JUDITH A. EISNER

EATING is the high spot of a dog's day. Whether they develop this unusual degree of gustatory anticipation from living in close proximity to American families or whether it's an inherent canine trait, we do not know. But it is a fact that American dogs are probably the best-fed (and most spoiled) in the world. In most parts of the globe, dogs aren't really fed at all; they scrounge about the barnyard or wherever in hopes of gleaning an odd scrap.

British dog books prove the exception to the general rule of badly-nourished canines. British dog owners cling to an old tradition of cooking odd things for dogs -- lamb kidneys, lightly boiled tripe, rabbit. Remember, rabbit is a socially acceptable and easily-accessible, reasonably priced meat in British butcher shops. (British cat books, by the way, are even more charming with their recipes for poached whiting and sauteed kippers and such.)

But we digress. In America, feeding a dog well is a simple matter of buying one or more of the high-quality dry, moist or semi-moist pet foods that line an entire aisle of most supermarkets. No need to grill or saute or poach exotic meats, steam vegetables and add cereals to balance the diet. But there are some things you should know about feeding your dog and making the most of his dinnertime.

Dogs are creatures of habit. Because of this, they are equally susceptible to forming both good and bad habits and sticking to them. They readily become accustomed to a routine and they are upset when the routine is altered or broken. Just as Lassie (the Come Home variety) waited for her young master to come home from school each day, so does the average dog wait for his dinner at the appointed hour. He may exhibit actual distress -- panting, whining, pacing -- if it is not forthcoming.

Dogs should have their own dishes for food and water. These can be simple stainless steel pans or hand-painted china. Whatever you fancy, the dog will adapt to, providing the dish fits the configuration of the dog's muzzle. Long-eared dogs are traditionally fed in deep, tapering dishes that keep their ears out of the chow. Short-nosed dogs do better with a flat rather than deep dish and so on.

Too many people neglect to put the dog's feed dish into the dishwasher after each use. Dirty, food-encrusted, fly-specked food pans are inexcusable and a potential source of disease. "Scrupulously clean" is a good way to describe the condition your pet's dishes should be kept. And water pans become scummy and algae-riddled if not scoured thoroughly at least once a day and refilled.

HOW DOGS EAT depends on the individual dog and his master. In the dog showing world, many dogs are fed "up" -- that is, on a platform, chair or other surface that brings the dog's dish to the approximate height of his shoulder blades. This prevents the dog from having to spread his forelegs and reach down to the floor to eat. Seems like a minor point, but old timers insist this reaching down to the floor loosens the animal's shoulders. Most dogs we know who are fed "up" seem to appreciate this refinement.

More dogs, however, do just fine being fed in a quiet corner of the kitchen, or on the service porch, or back steps. Indoors, a plastic place mat beneath the food pan keeps the floor cleaner, and a non-skid backing helps anchor the dish so the dog doesn't have to chase it around the room.

Few dogs like being disturbed at dinner. All dogs should be accustomed, from infancy, to having their food taken away from them and then returned. This prevents them from becoming overly protective and aggressive about food and insures that some unknowing child won't be bitten when he touches the dog's dish.

Dogs and cats should never be fed extremely hot or cold food. They may be smart enough to avoid really hot food, but dogs especially will "wolf" down refrigerator-cold food and may get tummy aches from it. Just warm, or slightly above room temperature is right for dog or cat food, and it should be cooled or warmed to approximately this degree before feeding. The food can be removed from the refrigerator an hour before feeding to permit it to warm.

No animal should be fed after violent exercise, and no matter how hot and panting the dog is, his access to water should be limited until he cools down gradually. Bloat, a dreaded condition where the stomach fills with gas that cannot escape, and bloat's partner in canine death, torsion (where the stomach flips over on its supporting ligaments), can both be caused by feeding or watering hot and recently-exercised dogs.

ADULT DOGS do very well on one meal a day, fed either morning or evening. If your dog really seems famished by suppertime, there's no harm in splitting his usual portion into two equal halves and feeding him breakfast and dinner. Just remember not to double his ration or he'll undoubtedly get fat. Two meals a day may be more satisfactory to the dog, but it does require that someone be there to remember to feed him two times instead of once daily.

Whether your dog receives the same old stuff day after day or enjoys a varied menu depends on both you and the dog. Despite commercials to the contrary, dogs seldom get bored with their food and happily eat the same thing year in and year out. But a dog can have a varied menu as long as his digestion can tolerate it. This means you can vary brands and varieties of dog food, fresh meats, table scraps, etc. as long as it adds up to a generally balanced diet and the dog does not suffer from loose stools, flatulence, vomiting or such. Dogs are much more likely to be gluttons than gourmets anyway.

DAVID BINDEL DOES IT AGAIN! He brings the internationally renowned Flamenco classical guitarist, Peter Evans, to King's Cross Station Sunday night from 8 to 12 p.m. A fine evening's entertainment is promised patrons of this popular Pacific Grove spot with this unusual booking. Lineup for the rest of the week is Steve Uhler Monday and Tuesday; Kathy Sollecito and Jim LeSage and group Wednesday through Saturday.

For a lunch treat try King's Cross Station's great sandwiches; pastrami, corn beef, Canadian bacon, Danish ham and cheese and David Bindel's great Stationburger; half-a-pound of char-broiled burger on pumpernickel, rye, or sourdough.

A CARRIAGE HOUSE SPECIAL TREAT is their broiled lobster, served with drawn butter or their filet and lobster. Dessert treats at Fritz and Lore's Carriage House include their Strawberry Freeze Surprise and their Viennese nut cake. After dinner choose a Goddess coffee, Marsala Almond on the rocks, or their Walnut Surprise; or a variety of Marsala cordials . . . strawberry, sherry, coffee, or Mandarin.

On Sunday don't miss their delightful champagne brunch, served from 11 until 2.

AMONG THE MENU SELECTIONS at The Golden Dragon Restaurant on Cannery Row are a great variety of chicken dishes; marinated chicken slices deep-fried in parchment, almond chicken, cashew chicken, Chinese and white mushroom chicken, curry chicken, pineapple chicken, and Szechuen chicken . . . (tender chicken and vegetables toss-cooked in a delicious peppery sauce with peanuts). Or try their Mandarin duck . . . pressed duck, steamed and deep fried. Served with sweet and sour sauce and almonds.

JOHN AND TOM TOM come back to Mike Tancredi's Hatch Cover Thursday night for a three-week engagement . . . Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights. This popular team packs them in every time. . . their music is contemporary folk rock, with John on the acoustic guitar and doing the vocal, while Tom comes in with the bass and autoharp, as well as some vocal.

A new addition to the menu at The Hatch Cover is beef fondue. Dinner service at this popular steak house starts at 6, entertainment at 9.

DOCTORS ATTENDING THE WESTERN SOCIETY OF PHYSICIAN'S meeting in Carmel will find a touch of New Orleans on the Peninsula at Hidden Village Coffee House in Monterey. Lunch and dinner are served in this delightful spot and brunch is served in the garden court on Sundays. A new addition to their selection of exotic coffees is Bayou Mud . . . a traditional Southern blend of chickory coffee, milk, cinnamon and whipped cream.

GOLFING DOCTORS WILL ENJOY LUNCHESES at Rancho Canada where sandwiches have imaginative names like Sand Wedge (shrimp and avocado), Medalist (broiled ground sirloin with jack cheese and Ortega chilies on sourdough with relleño sauce), and Double Eagle (broiled top sirloin steak and cottage cheese or french fries served with a Bloody Mary or a Salty Dog).

RUGGED OUTDOORSMAN Jeff Graham struggles in the arctic wastes of Alaska in 'North Country', a real-life adventure film now showing at the Jerry Lewis Cinema II in Carmel Center. The film covers a one-year period of woodsman Graham's life in the remote wilderness. A solitary figure, Graham lives off the land he loves, hunting only out of necessity and trapping just enough animals to pay for what he needs from civilization. Co-featured on the same bill is 'Big Foot', the story of the hairy, almost-human character reportedly living in the woods of the northwestern U.S.

Second 'Pops' concert coming up next Sunday

If you missed the first of the Monterey County Symphony's "Pops" concerts in November, be sure you're among those present on Sunday, Feb. 11 at 8 p.m. at Monterey Peninsula College's Gym-Auditorium when Haymo Taeuber gives the lighter type of music his special Viennese touch.

The program is purely for pleasure and toe-tapping. With a beautiful feminine pianist, Paulena Carter, featured in Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, and Debussy's Clair de Lune, and selections from Broadway hit tunes by the orchestra, The Man of La Mancha, and Aaron Copland's Rodeo, plus a couple of Strauss Waltzes and two typically American numbers for nostalgia, there's bound to be something for everyone.

Soloist Paulena Carter's talents were evident at an early age when she made a symphony concert debut at seven, and at nine won a scholarship to study with Olga Samaroff Stokowski at the Juilliard School of Music in New York. She performed with the Los Angeles Philharmonic under Alfred Wallenstein at the age of 13, and since then has performed with major symphony orchestras of the west.

Miss Carter has appeared as soloist on the Standard Symphony Hour, and had her own weekly radio broadcast over the NBC network for five years. In motion pictures, Miss Carter has doubled for several stars in scenes requiring piano proficiency. She has been highly praised for her performances of Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue.

The low price of tickets is made possible by a grant from Dart Industries, Inc. Ticket outlets are listed in the advertisement in this issue.

PAULENA CARTER will be piano soloist with the Monterey County Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Haymo Taeuber in the second "Pops" concert of the series presented at Monterey Peninsula College's Gym-auditorium, Sunday, Feb. 11 at 8 p.m.

Symphony to play free youth concerts Saturday

The Monterey County Symphony Orchestra, directed by Haymo Taeuber, will present the annual free Concerts for Youth Saturday at 11 a.m. at the Monterey Peninsula College gym-auditorium and at 2:30 p.m. in the Salinas Washington Junior High School Auditorium. Arrangements have been made in cooperation with the American Association of University Women.

Local school districts will provide bus transportation for intermediate grade students. Parents may also bring their children and attend the concerts.

Highlight of the program is Benjamin Britten's Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra, narrated by M. Scott MacClelland of K-WAV Master's Concerts.

Doctors take over

By FRANK H. RILEY, Director
Community and Cultural Activities

AS WE CLOSE OUT January (where did that month go?) and enter into February, we think "Doctors," for on Thursday (today), Friday and Saturday we will be hosting meetings of the Western Society for Clinical Research in both the main Sunset Center Theatre and in our large conference room. These physicians have been returning every year to Carmel for some time now, and Sunset Center is pleased to welcome them again to the City and to our facilities.

In keeping with the conference, we have again arranged to have our theatre foyer exhibit composed of art work by several local doctors. We are indebted to Dr. Philip Thorngate for arranging the show for us. It includes works by Dr. John Gratiot and Philip Thorngate and will remain in the foyer through Feb. 13. It may be seen at any time when an event is scheduled for the theatre.

Among such events are the following:

On Feb. 6, Tuesday, a free public lecture sponsored by the First Church of Christ Scientist of Carmel. It is scheduled for 8 p.m. No tickets are required.

On Feb. 9, Friday, at 8:15 p.m. Explorama brings Captain Irving Johnson to narrate his newest film saga of the sailing ship, Yankee, "Yankee Sails Inland." Julia Marlowe Tickets can arrange reserved seats. Call 624-9446.

On Feb. 10, Saturday, the Monterey Peninsula Chamber Music Society presents a concert by the French String Trio, a much acclaimed group. This event is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. Some tickets are usually available at the door on the night of the performance.

IN OTHER PARTS of the building, several classes spring to life. Notably, the University of California Santa Cruz extension course in basic horticulture taught by Mr. Jack G. Coffey which started on January 30 in Room 4 and will continue for ten Tuesdays.

Then another University of California Santa Cruz extension class, this one in the art of collage, begins at 9 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 3, also in Room 4. Yoga starts Tuesday, the 6th. There will be both morning and evening sessions. Pick whichever is most convenient and sign up for the eight-lesson series.

The Sunset Center guitar classes begin on Wednesday, the 7th, 4 p.m. for school students, 7:30 p.m. for adults. The classes are one hour each and both continue for six weeks.

Bridge games continue as usual while Bonsai tree culture classes under Colonel Burns and the art of Mime under Jan Kessler will start in March. Beginners are welcome since no previous experience is required to join any of these classes.

The Marjorie Evans Gallery which has been without an exhibit for several weeks will offer a very personal "Abraham Lincoln" exhibit starting on Feb. 5. Original documents and other mementos of the Great Emancipator collected on the scene by an ancestor of Ashton Stanley will be featured. As always, admission to The Marjorie Evans' exhibits will be without charge.

Forest Theater Guild plans two Shakespeare plays for this summer

City Councilman Gunnar Norberg was elected president of the Forest Theater Guild Monday evening at a meeting of the guild's board of directors held at the Forest Theater.

The guild's president, Cole Weston, resigned since he is scheduled to leave on a sailing trip to the south seas and Norberg said his "resignation was accepted with reluctance." Weston will still, however, remain a member of the board.

Violet Baldwin was elected vice-president and re-elected were Doris Kercheval as secretary, Patricia Doolittle as treasurer, Philip Oberg as legal advisor, Carvel Baldwin as financial advisor and Margo Hyatt as publicity director.

The board voted to produce Shakespeare's Richard III in July and Much Ado About Nothing in August at the Forest Theater. Charles Thomas, who directed last summer's Twelfth Night, will direct Richard.

Thomas, three times past president of the Carmel Art Association, is a former New York actor and director. Richard Vreeland, an official with the Monterey County Department of Education, will direct Much

CLASSIFIED

Ado and both plays will be produced by Norberg.

Shakespeare readings are held by the guild every Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the underground portion of the theatre and anyone interested in trying out for either of the two plays is welcome to attend the readings.

Community Theatre reorganizes, hopes to resume play production

The Community Theatre of the Monterey Peninsula held its annual membership meeting on Monday, Jan. 22 to elect a new board of governors. On Tuesday, Jan. 30, the new board met and elected the following officers: Francis Heisler, president; Sam Karas, first vice-president; Derek Napier Lawford, second vice-president; Harriet Shanner, third vice-president; Pearl Carey, secretary; and Margaret Heater, treasurer.

Board members appointed to chair various working committees were: W.H. Scholefield, Fritz Wurzmann, Diane Hardy, John Hicks, Mrs. Harry Graham and Ray Mann. Other members of the board of governors include: Leonard Klene, Thomas Moore, James Thomas, Mary Sweeney and Roz Zanides.

Newly-elected president Francis Heisler appointed a committee of six to explore the possibilities of finding a new home for the Theatre, and a final decision is expected to be made at the next board of governors' meeting, set for Feb. 26. The Community Theatre formerly occupied the Circle Theatre on Casanova in Carmel, but gave up its lease on the building when it was discovered that extensive restoration would be necessary to bring the old theatre up to fire and safety codes.

Heisler expressed hope that the Community Theatre "may be able to begin performing again in the early spring of 1973."

Riderless horse killed on C. V. Road

A riderless mare belonging to Michele Trivitte of West Carmel Valley Road was killed by a Pacific Telephone van Sunday after it threw its riders and ventured out onto Carmel Valley Rd.

The incident occurred between the two Scarlett Road intersections. The horse was being ridden by Kathleen Jones of Fresno, with Mrs. Trivitte's daughter, Heidi, riding double. According to Mrs. Trivitte, the horse, although normally gentle and used for riding lessons, began bucking and threw its riders in the pasture behind the Mark Thomas home on Scarlett Rd. The horse then left the pasture through an open gate and headed for Carmel Valley Rd., where it was subsequently struck by a Pacific Telephone van driven by Charles E. Speyerer of Carmel Highlands.

Neither rider was injured in the fall, although the Carmel Valley Fire Department first aid crew sent an ambulance to the scene of the accident. Speyerer was uninjured; the horse was killed instantly.

Tantamount Gallery shows John Russell paintings

John Russell, young Carmel artist, marks his first one-man show this month in the Green Room Gallery of the Tantamount Theater.

Born in Fresno in 1951, Russell moved to Carmel on graduation from high school in 1969. He attended MPC for two years. The majority of his recent paintings are described as impressionistic landscapes, others as primitive with influences of American Indian design.

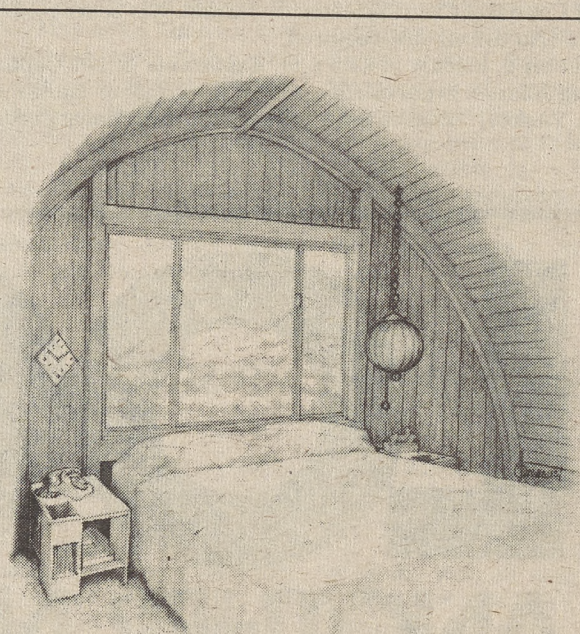

He received first place in the Hallmark statewide Art Competition, a Bank of America Art Award, and a scholarship to the San Francisco Academy of Art.

The Green Room Gallery is open afternoons from 2 to 5 p.m. except Sunday and Monday, and Friday and Saturday evenings from 7 to 11, and other hours by appointment.

FOR LEASE

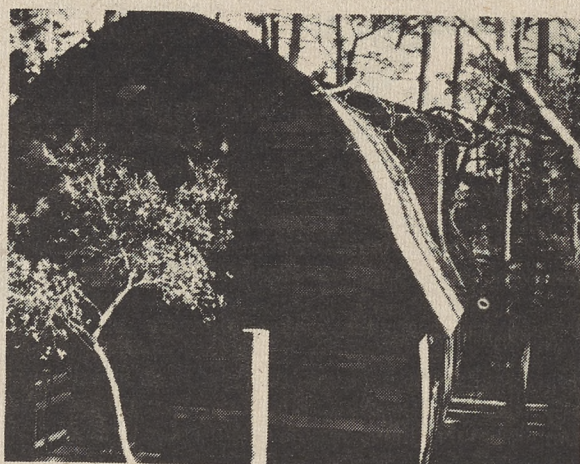

The store formerly occupied by the laundromat at Valley Hills Center adjacent to the Thunderbird and across from Quail Lodge is available for a retail shop lease. 1050 square feet.

From the Principal's Desk

By PHILIP K. SMITH
Principal, Carmelo School

Since 1965 Carmelo School has initiated many changes in its organization and instructional program. Many questions have been asked by students, parents and staff. As a result, there has been constant interest and enthusiasm by those involved in this process. Let me share some of those questions with you in an attempt to explain Carmelo's program.

I. When and why did Carmelo School change from self contained classrooms?

In 1964, the staff felt the instructional program could be strengthened. It was at this time that a thorough study of research occurred and a plan was developed similar to our present organization.

II. Carmelo is considered a nongraded, team teaching school. What does this mean?

I've never been impressed with labels. What counts is what occurs between the teacher and student in the learning environment; however, let me answer the question. Carmelo's students are not grouped according to First Grade, Second Grade, Third Grade, etc. Instead, children belong to an organizational family. If they are 5, 6 or 7 years old they are part of the Alpha unit. We have two other units, Beta and Gamma for older students. The grouping plan presently used is similar to the "one-room school" concept used in the 1860's at Carmelo.

There are numerous "nongraded" definitions available today. I think of Carmelo's nongradedness as an organizational plan that assists us in meeting the needs of children more effectively.

Team teaching has many meanings to different people. At Carmelo our teachers work together cooperatively using their strengths to provide a program that will be challenging and motivating for students. Our cooperative teaching provides flexibility and gives the student options which in my opinion, has been needed for many years.

III. How are children grouped in classes?

Two types of grouping are used at Carmelo - Need and Interest. After careful diagnosis teachers plan groups which will assist students to become more proficient in specific areas. I call this need grouping as the group is created according to a student's strength or weakness. This type of grouping is used most often at Carmelo, and students spend time in the grouping as needed to accomplish the task.

Our second type of grouping - Interest, is being used more and more. After class discussions and administering surveys to the students we determine interest groups. The time a student spends in any interest group varies considerably.

IV. How will a parent know about his child's progress?

By attending a parent-teacher conference a parent can gain much information. Parents may request a conference at any time during the school year. The teaching staff may also request conferences. Individual teachers or the team of teachers may be involved in the conference.

V. Does the staff and administration of Carmelo School endorse the present program?

Very definitely! Our staff is enthusiastic and energetic. We work well together and are always seeking better ways of improving instruction. Many of our present staff were involved with the planning in 1965.

VI. What do you mean when you say you are Individualizing Instruction?

We are attempting to individualize instruction for our students. Many programs have been developed by staff which have assisted us immensely. We are primarily concerned with providing our students with those experiences that will help them progress at their own rate of learning. Basically, that's what it's all about.

You know as well as I do that all people do not learn the same thing at the same time or the same rate, neither do our students. Some students have difficulty with reading while other students seem to be quite proficient. Our main concern: is the student making the progress we think he should be making? If he is making that progress then we continue our instructional plan which we have designed for him. If he isn't making that progress then another plan must be developed.

Through the individualization of instruction we are able to help students become self-directed and self-motivated learners. In doing this the instructional process establishes independence for the student rather than dependence. Thus he really becomes involved with his learning at school, at home - everywhere.

VII. What can parents do to assist Carmelo's program? How can I, as a parent help?

Parents have always demonstrated positive support for Carmelo's program. Many parents, who have available time, volunteer to assist in the library, classrooms or work on special projects. Our Parents Club has always been quite active and supportive. Most of our parents belong to Parents Club and show their support at various activities throughout the year.

VII. What reading programs does Carmelo use?

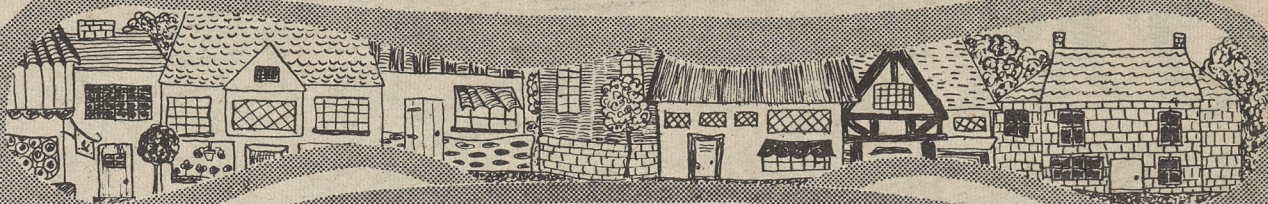

There are many programs used in the teaching of reading at Carmelo. Realizing that our students are individuals and recognizing the many individual differences we use the type of program that gives the student the most success. We are fortunate to have alternate programs available for our students.

IX. Why do some students begin school at 8:45 and some at 10:00?

First of all, only the Alpha and some Beta students are involved in the 8:45 and 10:00 hours.

Secondly, the primary reason for having a staggered reading program is to provide an environment which is more conducive to the teaching of reading. Class size is small which gives the teacher an opportunity to work more effectively with each student.
